

Necessary Knowledge

By Anna Von Reitz

At the beginning of creation, light was organized into matter. This marriage of light in wave form to light in particle form has given rise to the Universe as we know it.

No biological entity remembers this First Marriage of Light, but within us, we each carry the memory of 13.8 billion years of history since then, and that history for each one of us is unique.

As we stand here today, we each represent a single continuous life that has never died in 13.8 billion years.

It is the same life, garnering new experiences.

Against this backdrop, we must ask ourselves what right we have to foreclose the lives of future generations?

In our biological beginning, five humanoid races were formed using the brain stems of four reptiles and one amphibian.

We remember this each time we look at the fingers on our hands or see the five-pointed star which is the symbol of humankind.

The feathers of birds are just modified scales, and to this day, if you look closely at the skin on your hand, you can see the tiny, tiny scales that overlap and make up your own skin.

Our blood has the same acidity and mineral content as seawater.

Do you think this is an accident? Or are we all related? Not only to each other, but to all living things and to our environment as well?

We are not separate parts of the Universe. We are the Universe discovering itself.

So we have come here today as conscious beings aware of the past and presuming the existence of a future.

We have only one choice on the table -- to live or to die.

Let us choose life.

So long ago that nobody remembers, except that our DNA remembers, Armorican sailors from what we now call Normandy in France, found their way to the New World.

"North America" and "South America" are named after the Armoricans.

The Armoricans formed Blood Treaties with all the tribal nations they traded with. Their DNA markers show up coast to coast and from Patagonia to Alaska.

When the Holy Roman Empire formed in Europe in 800 AD, the Armoricans and their Iroquois League Trading Partners had to negotiate with the Holy Roman Empire regarding their own ancient fur trade in Europe. They did so as The United Nations of Armorica.

"Nations" referred to the five nations of the Iroquois League and "Armorica" referred to the land area where the Armoricans had established Blood Treaties. Together, these nation-states negotiated with Charlemagne at least 1200 years ago.

How, then, has it been misrepresented that there was no government here?

After the War of Independence, the new nation formed of many nations, used the template of The United Nations of Armorica to build their government and used Philadelphia, our traditional meeting ground, as the Capitol.

The unincorporated union of nation-states known now as The United States and the unincorporated federation of states known as The United States of America remain the organic government of this country called "America".

Anna Maria Riezinger is the Fiduciary for the Government of Record; her husband is the holder of the Great Seals and hereditary clan chief of the Belle Chers, who include the Armoricans among their nations.

The Blood Treaties of the Armoricans and First Nations and the first government formed as The United Nations of Armorica, predate the government formed in 1776 by hundreds of years; yet, The United Nations of Armorica gave rise to The United States of America, in name, in spirit, in structure, in custom, and in fact -- and the progeny of the original clan and tribal chiefs remain steadfast in their claims and faithful administration of the organic government they have inherited.

This world needs peace, healing, and the remembrance of our common origins and destinies, not more genocide and craziness.

We stand for life and love and common sense. We set aside any agenda saying otherwise.
